

Says That Federal Prisons Are

Kind.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
GREENSBORO, N. C., October 2.—In the Federal Court here this afternoon, Judge Boyd refused a motion by counsel for D. M. Arey, of Salisbury, for a suspension of execution of judgment against him until Tuesday, ordering him in custody.

Six months ago, Aroy, who is the wealthiest distiller in the State, pleaded guilty to an indictment of several counts, charging stupendous frauds against the government in selling large quantities of spirits on which no taxes had been paid. Judgment to the amount of his distiller's bond for twenty-two thousand dollars

With the costs, amounted to twenty-five thousand dollars, by far the largest fine ever imposed in this State.

SENTENCE WAS DELAYED.

Judge Boyd imposed a punishment on one count in which judgment was prayed of three months in jail and two hundred dollars fine. Owing to the large sum to be raised, the extent of Carey's business; his age and the hot weather, execution of sentence was delayed until October 2d. To-day Judge Boyd declined to con-

But five thousand dollars of the sentence has yet been paid. It is said that unless Arey pays it in full, he will be sentenced to the penitentiary on some of the other counts. He is reputed to be worth half a million dollars, made out of whiskey manufacturing, rectifying and shipping. Attorneys are said to have moved heaven and earth in efforts to get Washington authorities to pardon him or commute his sentence before the jail service began.

enue officials indicted for frauds against the government will not be called before Thursday, owing to the enforced absence of one of counsel for the defendants, ex-Governor Aycock being engaged until then in cases before the Supreme Court at Raleigh. The grand jury are considering bills against sheriffs and jailers in several counties for giving Federal prisoners sentenced to imprisonment in full undue liberty, in paying visits to their families and in making calls. Indictments are also being returned against

In his charge to the grand jury this morning Judge Boyd said that while juries and sheriffs might think a Federal prisoner a superior kind of being, he was in reality and in law just as ordinary and common a mortal as a State or county criminal sentenced to jail as punishment, and entitled to no extra privileges.

The largest number of visiting lawyers ever known to attend an opening day of court are here, and many more expected.

Some of them coming from remote sections of the State.

Some prominent officials from Washington have arrived, and prominent revenue officials present are both Internal Revenue Collectors Harkins, of Asheville, and Duncan, of Raleigh.

for simply the Rev. Dr. Kerr Boyce Tupper, for the last nine years pastor of the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia. His morning service was held in the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, Thirty-first Street and Madison Avenue. Dr. Tupper's predecessor was the Rev. George W. Tupper, who died suddenly while on a vacation trip to Europe last year.

Dr. Tupper in his first words to his new congregation, which filled the big auditorium, outlined what he had intimated would during the term of his pastorate constitute the religious platform of the Madison Avenue Church.

"It is an established fact," he said, "that every church of Jesus Christ must have a that the churches may be of like vintage and send out to the world a common cloth. It is not so. Trinity Church, with its head of a lion, stands in a session. The Brick Church in Fifth Avenue has another. A church that does not discharge its mission never can be truly guided.

There are some fundamental essentials that church ought to reveal. One is an unshaken loyalty to the Christian faith, the organ through which must flow the blood of a common life and the thrill of a common purpose. Not long ago the members of the London conference were expelled from his club. To his query as to what the trouble might be he was told that the charges were of no importance.

Mr. W. Wallace Rowe, of the post-office, goes on his vacation to-day and will spend most of it at Crozet, Va.
